

The highlights are as follows:

- We analyzed spontaneous turn-transition prediction by children ages 1–6.
- Children and adults primarily make anticipatory gazes following questions.
- Two-year-olds already predicted upcoming responses at rates greater than chance.
- We find no evidence that lexicosyntax is sufficient for children's prediction.